MS. SHELBY THOMAS: -- Audette, this afternoon we will be hearing from Lillian Cook, who will be sharing her personal survivor story.

Mr. Registrar, Lillian would like to promise to tell the truth in a good way.

MR. REGISTRAR: Good afternoon, Lillian, do you promise to tell your truth in a good way this afternoon.

MS. LILLIAN COOK: I do.

LILLIAN COOK, Affirmed:

MR. REGISTRAR: Okay, thank you.

MS. SHELBY THOMAS: Lillian, could you introduce yourself to Commissioner Audette, and tell her where you're from.

MS. LILLIAN COOK: Okay. Hello. I'm from Sagkeeng. My name is Lillian Cook, and I'm from Sagkeeng. I grew up on the north shore. And it's a community down south, and -- and the reserve is divided by a town, so there's a -- on Highway 11 -- the north side, which I live, so we're in between these two towns, so that's where actually where I'm from.

MS. SHELBY THOMAS: Lillian, in whatever details you feel comfortable, can you share your personal survivor story.

MS. LILLIAN COOK: Yeah, okay, sure. I grew up on the north shore. I grew up in -- in a foster family. I was adopted out when I was five days old and I grew up with my biological mother's first cousins. So that's who raised me, and -- and my dad was -- the one who raised me was born in 1902 and my grandma was born in 1987 (sic) so -- and my mom and my dad were 13 years apart, so I grew up very -- I grew up with my language. I never lost my language, I was affluent speaker, that's all they ever spoke was Anishnabe -- was Ojibway in the home. There was only three of us in the house -- I mean as children, there was my -- my sister, she was 13 years older than me, and of course, my -- my little brother, who's four years younger than me. But we were all foster children. We were actually adopted, I believe and --

But anyways aside from that, all my first cousins are deceased. My second cousins, they're in their 70s so that's probably why I'm alone up here. And all my family gone.

But as -- as -- growing up, where I come from, on the north shore, you know, a lot of things happened and I remember just listening back to some of what the families were saying this morning, and it's so true -- like when there's sexual violence, all those things happen. And when I was 12 years old and that's what happened to me is that I was -- I was raped when 12 and I didn't know that -- what was happening to me. I didn't realize that I was being groomed as a child. That I'd be a victimized. That I'm be raped at 12 by a married man. Who had his own children. You know, he had a wife and he had children.

And -- but I didn't know, like all the kindness because that's the kindness that I grew up with living with a bunch of elderly people. They took good care of you. So naturally it was okay for me when somebody offered me a -- a Pepsi. I remember the Pepsi with the little -- there was two holes on top of a can, so I remember that you know. And then I remember the Wigwag bar that he gave me, and telling me how pretty I was, and giving me bars -- different types of bars. I always remember different bars like the one was -- was that Eatmore bar was another one, that's an old bar, it's still around, you know. So I remember all those things, and you know, telling me how pretty I was, and so every once in a while he'd touch my hand whenever I seen him.

And he was in his 20s, I was just 12. I really wasn't even developed yet, you know, but -- you know, and one time we were -- my girlfriends and I, we were playing in the car an old abandoned car and he came there and he -- I was sitting in the back seat with -- and my girlfriends were in the front seat and pretending to drive, and I was in the back seat and -- with my other friend and you know, and he pulled the mirror down and he winked at me, and, oh, how I wish -- I wanted to be his wife. I just was so happy that there was this older man and he just -- you know, that he was interested in me, he was telling me how pretty I was and how nice -- and oh, I wished --

You know, I remember one time he said to me when I had my toboggan, hey, I pulled my toboggan and we were going to go tobogganing, me and my friends and he said to me, “I wish you were my wife. I'd take good care of you.” And I wanted that. I wanted him to look after me.
I wanted him to take me away. And I -- you know, and so I was so happy that this older man was doing all these wonderful things for me.

And then -- and then -- then one day you know, it was like months, but there was lots of stuff that was going on. He'd play with my hair. He told me how pretty my hair was and you know, and I liked that, you know, like all the little boys didn’t do things like that.
You know.

And the last time I ever seen my dad -- like my dad died in 1978, and he was 72 when he died, so I never had no really any male contact after my dad to give me attention and to -- to love me, but this man did. You know.

So from there there's a lot of things that happened, you know, and he never forced himself on me for a long time. He just told me that he liked the way I looked. I was this pretty little girl. I was this -- you know, and -- and that he would take care of me. Wished he'd get a wish he didn't have his wife and -- and that I was his wife and then I'd cook for him and I'd say, "Yeah -- yeah -- yeah -- yeah, I wish too." You know, I'd say that, and I'd be so shy and he'd laugh at me and -- and then he'd touch me. You know, he'd touch my shoulder, or touch my hair, and then he'd leave. So -- and I looked forward to seeing him all those times that he was doing those things.

And then one night my girlfriend and I, we were down -- down the bank and we were playing marbles -- that's how it happened, and he called me. He called me to his car. And I was so excited to go. I wanted to go, you know, he -- he wanted -- I thought maybe he -- I don't know, that he'd give me another gift or just tell me how pretty I was, and you know, just look after me and that's what I wanted and I ran to him.

But this time he took me you know, and my girlfriend said, you know, and I -- I just remember her Lillian Cook saying, “Don't leave, don't leave. Don't leave.” But I wanted to go with him so I -- I jumped in the car and away I went. And then you know, he took me to the bush, you know, and that's where he raped me. It was so fast. And you know -- I don't know how else to tell you, just that I was 12, he was a -- a man. And he just took me down so quick. I -- I was helpless. I couldn't do nothing. You know, and he tore off my pants. Tore off my clothes -- my top was ripped. My -- I was wearing -- I always remember that yellow satin shirt, that's what I was wearing, and he ripped that. You know, and I wasn't even developed yet. And I couldn't do nothing. I had to just let it happen.

And -- and then I was just crying, and he was telling me, “Not to cry -- not to cry that it will be over soon.” That's what he said to me, “It will be over soon. Don't cry. Don't cry. It will be over -- it will be over. It will be okay.” You know, and I -- and I was just crying. I couldn't -- I couldn't help -- I couldn't help myself.

But I always remember how -- what I did for it to stop, or for it -- for it -- for me to think that it was stopping is that I seen -- I seen the trees, that's what I saw -- I saw the trees, and I looked at those trees and then I put myself on those trees, that's what I did. Just so I wouldn't feel what was happening to me, so I was sitting -- well, I remember sitting on that tree, thinking that's where I was. And just looking around and thinking that everything is going to be okay. And then finally he was done. During the time that I felt like I was on the tree, I didn't feel nothing. I didn't feel no pain. Because I was 12. I had never had any sexual contact with any male. It was my first time that something like that would happen.

And you know -- but it was my friend -- it was my friend who -- who helped me. She was the one who phoned the police. I don't -- and it was because of her that they found me and -- and him. They found us. And we were -- you know, I went to the police station, he was at the police station. And -- and then my friend was already waiting for me at the police station, and she was crying. You know, and -- and I was always so grateful for her being beside me during that time because of the questioning. She was one year older than I was, but the police -- what they said, and pretty much what the families have said, is that you don't get the support. The police -- they don't care. They don't care.

You know, for me, when I was being questioned one of the things the police officer said to me was -- because my friend wanted charges laid on him. And you know -- and -- and then he said to me -- and there I was sitting there, trying to cover up -- cover up whatever I had you know, this torn shirt, it was a satin shirt -- back then, you know, like disco was in, and everybody wore the satin, and that's what I was wearing. And I was trying to cover up and then I was trying to hold my pant together because he ripped by pants, my zipper was completely torn right off, it wouldn't close. My -- my little snap on didn't even want to work because there wasn't a button, but it was a snap on -- didn't even want to work. That was damaged.
And I was trying to hold myself together so this police officer wouldn't have to look at me sitting there naked,
you know.

And then he said to me, "I don't think they're going to believe you when you go to the hospital because what's going to happen to you here," he says, "Is once you press charges we're going to have to take you to the hospital and the doctor's not going to believe you because the doctor is going open up your legs, once he opens up your legs he's going to see if you're a virgin or not. You might be a virgin, I don't know."

I was 12. I'd never had any sexual contact, but for him, those were his questions, that's what he was saying to me, you know. "Like are you a virgin? Did you have -- did you have -- did you sleep with a -- did you have intercourse,"" I think is what -- what he said to me, but you know, I told him, “No -- no, I didn't.” And he says, “Well, the doctor will know anyway if you're a virgin or not.” And -- and then he says, “And what they're going to do is you're going to have to lay down on the bed,” he said, “The doctor is going to lay you down on the bed and he's going to open up your legs and he's going to examine you in there.” He says, “He's going to take a look inside there and he'll check, he'll know for sure if -- if you're a virgin, because doctors can tell.” And I was like, I didn't want that. And I said, “No -- no, never mind.” And then my mom came in.

And why I didn't press charges on him at that time was because of my mother, and my mother said, “What's happening? What's going on?” And my friend was crying and I was -- I didn't even cry, I just -- I was just sitting there, but she was crying and I was wondering why my friend was just crying so bad and -- and here I was just sitting there and hoping that they don't take me to the doctor. I didn't want any -- I didn't want another man inspecting me down there. I didn't want that.

So anyway, my mom was standing there and she said, “No.” Well, she -- they'll end up telling her what's going to happen, they're going to examine her, the doctor will examine her and this is what's going to happen, so my mom said, “No. We're not going to charge him. I don't want to -- I don't want to -- I don't want to take her to the hospital, and I'm not going to press charges.” And then the police said, “Well, yeah, that's good because you know after the doctor examines her to see if she's a virgin or not,” he says, “Then she has to go to court, and she's going to have to talk about all this over again.” So I was like, oh, I didn't want that. And you know, my mom said “I'm taking her home.”

So I went home and locked myself in a room and I didn't want anybody to see me, so it was really hard for me during that time, but you know, there was other things traumatic in my life -- like I mentioned my dad had passed away when I was 12. Six months before I was raped my -- my father was killed on the north shore road. He was coming home from visiting his brother and -- and my dad was 72 and he barely would see but he went for a walk and these two cars were drag racing and they hit him and they killed my dad.

But the only one that was home that night was me -- me and my little brother. My sister was out, you know, she was drinking. My mom was at bingo, and the only one old enough in the house -- I was all excited that there was all these police outside, was me. And so there was a knock on the door, and at that time my aunt and uncle were at bingo, and the next door neighbour -- nobody was like -- there was -- I don't know, but everybody seemed to be always at bingo.

And I -- so I -- I seen all these lights and I was so happy, and I was telling my little brother, “Oh, look -- look -- look, there's something going on there and they must be stopping somebody. They stopped somebody.”

And so we're trying to see, like, what was going on. And - - and anyway there was a knock on the door and it was a police officer and -- and he said, “Is there anybody older in the house?” And I said, “No.” I said, “No, just -- just me.” And he says, “Are you sure?” And I said, “Yeah, just -- just me.” And he says, “Would you come and see a body -- like there's an accident would you come and see this accident?” So I said, “Yeah, sure.” And I told my little brother, “I'm going to see an accident.” I was so happy. “I'm going to go see an accident.” He said, “Okay -- okay, go -- go -- go,” so away he went, and so he's peeking out the window.

And I'm -- and the first thing I see -- I already seen what was that -- already recognized who that was. It was part of my dad. His leg had been severed right off and that's why -- that's what was laying on our driveway and the rest of him was laying on the -- on the road. And all I remember is lots of blood, that's what I seen. And -- but of course, they take you and you look -- the police take you and -- took me right to the -- right to
-- to my dad. My dad was laying on his tummy, but I already seen who it was, and I said, “That's my dad.”

So -- so it was hard -- it was really hard for me, so six months -- about six months later is when I'd be -- when I was raped, so I missed my dad, and -- and somebody else taking an interest in me, you know, an older man, I felt good, somebody was going to look after me was another male, and I was so happy.

But because of that first trauma my mom and them knew that there was something wrong where me because I couldn't sleep. I was staying up late. My grades fell. I was just -- I knew I wasn't right. And my family knew, but they did their best to try and help me, and I'm -- and I was really fortunate though that I had a good support team.
My support team isn't here because they're all gone, but -- but I had a wonderful group of women who looked after me, and my uncle who looked after me.

So you know, and helped me make it through,
and then when this would happen -- happen to six months later when -- when the assault took place is when I fell apart. I started drinking at 12 years old, and I started with -- with vanilla. It said alcohol, but I had to sleep, I couldn't sleep because I saw my dad and I saw the lights, or I would picture myself on that tree or I'd picture him or I'd smell him -- that smell stayed for a long time, more so than I witnessed anything else. You know. And I then I couldn't get rid of that scent. I couldn't -- it was so hard and -- so I with went just with that -- all that trauma and -- and then I fell deeper -- deeper I guess, into depression. I did get counselling therapy because there was a lot of suicide attempts, all kinds of stuff going on, more drinking and -- and after the drinking you know, I got better. For a little while I got better.

And then I encountered -- see I was given away -- my biological mom had eight kids and out of the eight she gave one away and that's me. She gave me away, and I'm the second youngest. She kept my -- my sister, my baby sister, but she gave me away, so I grew up with her first cousin.

And I never met -- I never knew my biological family in -- in a way where we would be like brothers and sisters, that never happened. My brother and sister was always the family that I grew up with -- those -- that was my family. But I never knew who they were, or who their husbands or wives were. I just knew that that was my brother and that was my sister, but there was no like,
"Hello Lillian, how are you?" There wasn't any of that.

So I was walking home from my uncle's -- and from down the river I was walking home and -- and then this Lillian Cook

The car stops and said to me, “Hey, get in -- get in.” And I didn't want to get in. I said, “No -- no, I'm going home. I said (speaking Native language).” And he was fluent in Ojibway, and he said (speaking Native language), and then he made like a -- “Like, come in -- like just -- just, come in, I'm just going to drive you home. You've not even going to be -- it's just up the road there.” And he says, “And come on, they're -- her sister, I'll drive you home.” He says, “I recognize you.”

And so I thought, okay, that's -- that's my sister's husband, so, okay, I'll get in. So I got into the car, but my instinct told me not to do it. You wouldn't believe how powerful that -- that instinct was, “Don't get in.” But he kept saying, “Come on, (speaking Native language)” and he started laughing, “Are you scared?” That's what he said to me, “Are you -- (speaking Native language).” And I said, “No, (speaking Native language).” So he said, “Get in.” So I got in.

I didn't want to be scared and -- so I got in and -- and then we drove by my house -- we passed my house. And we -- and I said, “Drop me off. Just drop me off. Stop. Stop. Stop.” And then he's just laughing. And he says, “What are you so scared of? We'll just go for a ride.” And you know, and I knew that I was trouble and I couldn't get out.
Some time -- for the longest time I blamed myself because I had every opportunity, I thought to open that door and flew out, full speed down the highway, but because I was too chicken to do that, I endured -- endured -- endured him and travelling to wherever we were going to go.

So then he did, and we went into -- I don't know -- I don't know where he took me, and it's something that I'll never know because he's deceased now, so it's something that I -- I don't know because he had my head down all the way, so I don't know where I went. I just know that I was in the bush. We went far -- far into the bush, and he let me out of the car. He says, “Well, get out then.” So I got out of the car and I started running and there was all these trees, it was just like a -- like a trail -- like a trail into the bush. It was so -- it was just all covered with bush, and I was trying to run and he caught up to me and he tripped me and he just jumped on me. He didn't bother me or anything, he just jumped on me. And he's just laughing and he's just kissing, you know, he started kissing me and, oh, I didn't want anybody to kiss me. You know, and I was moving my head and trying get away from all this -- what he was trying do and he laughed and he let me go.

And so I took off running again and he's faster than me and he caught up to me and he tripped me and he just hung onto my ankle and you know, and -- you know, and I was crying -- crying, “Let me go, let me go. Just let me go.” And he's just laughing.

So three times he did that and three times we did that where all that would go -- happen over and over again, you know, tripping me, and kissing me, and then the -- you know, and then the -- you know, the touching me all over, you know, and just laughing at me.

And then finally that's when he just -- he just started like really touching me all over and he was kissing me and -- and he ripped off my clothes. And I was screaming all the way through, and I said, “Don't do it. Don't -- don't -- don't -- don't.” And -- and he just said, “You know, oh, you remind me of her so much. You remind me of her so much, a young her --" meaning my sister, “A young her,” he said, and you know, and I cried -- I cried and I just told him not to, “Just don't do this to me.”

But once he was finished -- after he was finished with me, he said -- he sat on the -- on the grass because he rolls off me, and he sits down and I'm -- and I'm trying to grab whatever I have to cover myself up, and he's -- you know, he's worried -- I guess he's worried now and he says, “Oh,” you know -- he's swearing. “What am I going to do with you? What the hell am I going to do with you?” And he says, “I should Fing kill you. I should Fing kill you and nobody will even know. Nobody will Fing know where you are.” And I said, “Don't kill me. Don't -- I -- I won't tell anybody. I'll never tell. I swear I'll never tell.” And he says, “You Fing liar. You Fing liar. Now, look --" he says, “Now look at what you did.” “Now," he says, “My marriage is over because of you. Because of you," he says, “Our -- my marriage is over. Look at what you did to me. Look at what you did.” And I said, “I'm sorry. I'm sorry. Just let me -- just let me go.” And he says, “I'll fucking kill you right here.” He says nobody will fucking know right now.” And then he -- and I said, “No, I -- I -- I'm begging you.” And I said his name, “I'm begging you. Just -- just keep me alive -- I don't want to. I'll never tell anybody.”

And then that's where you know, I make a deal for my life. And then he says to me, “Well, this is what --" well, he says -- and I tell him, “I'll do whatever it is you want me to do. What is it you want me to do?” And he says, “Well, suck my cock.” Suck my cock. That's what he said to me. And I didn't even know what the hell that was. You know, and so I did it. And, oh, it was just the most horrible -- horrible experience in my life to have to do that, and I was naked through all this. And -- and you know and -- you know, and when he was done, you know, and that he -- he wouldn't stop, like he -- he kept saying -- swearing at me, calling me down. He told me that I was a whore. "You're just a whore. You know, that's all you are." He says, "That's why that --" you know, and you know, and then he knocked me down and you know, when he did that and I was so scared. I was really just terrified of him.

And -- and then he's -- and then that's when he says, "You -- you know what you did?" He says, "You know what you did?" And I said, "No -- no -- no, I don't know what I did." And he says, "You've fucking ruined my I'm going to just fucking kill you right here. I'm going to fucking kill you. Nobody will fucking know who you -- nobody will ever find you. I'll strangle you." He said, "I'll fucking choke you. Nobody will fucking know. And I'll just leave you here." And I said, "Don't do it.
Don't do it. I swear I -- I -- I -- I won't tell anybody.
I won't tell anybody. I'll -- I'll just -- I'll -- I'll just forget for everything." And he says, "You liar." He says, "You're a liar. That's all you are is a liar." And I said, "I'm not. I'm not. I'll keep it is a secret."

And he's -- and then you know, I was praying.
I always remember praying. I was praying -- praying -- praying that I'd live -- to let me live. And I told him that, “Just let me live. I just want to -- I -- I just want to see my mom again. I want to go home. Let me go home.”

And then he said -- you know, and he had no pity. That was my own brother-in-law, he had no pity for me. None. You know, and -- and then he's -- you know, I don't know how long we were in the bush because three times he raped me in the bush. The third time is when he actually lets me go after more deals. We have to do more deals for me to -- for him to be happy -- to be satisfied, there's more deals that have to be made, more things that I have to do. That I never ever did. And a lot of the things that I had to do are secret and nobody's ever known, things that I had to do. And it was something that I was really ashamed of for the longest time because I had to survive though. I had to live.

You know, you don't know the amount of terror that goes on when you're begging for your life after being raped and then you're -- you -- and then you know, and you're being tripped, you know, and you're being knocked down, and then you have to run and then you're begging and then there's laughter -- lots of laughter because he thinks it's so much fun. For me it wasn't fun. I didn't think it was funny at all. And I honestly thought I was going to die that night. I really did. But instead he -- he left me. He left me in the bush, and so then it was time for me to -- to make my way out. He told me just to stay there in the bush ‘til he was gone.

And then I -- I let him go, you know, and I don't ever remember mosquitoes or anything like that. I don't, maybe I blocked it. I don't know what -- I don't remember anything like that, but I made it out of the bush, and it was all -- you know, in our language (speaking Native language). It was all full trees and -- because it was night. I was just trying to get out of there.

And then of course, I've got nothing on. But I'm standing on the side of the road and I'm -- and a car is there -- and what else stops is a man, you know. And that -- and he covered me up. He gave me a what he had, and then he wanted to take me to the police station, is what he wanted to do. I didn't want to go there. You know, I didn't want to go there and have all that happen -- reoccurring again. I didn't want that, so I avoided that, and I said, “Just take me home.” So I made it home.

My mom used to sleep on the couch. She didn't know what happened. I mean she thought that was gone to go for a sleepover. She didn't know where I was. And then I came home and nobody knew, and I'd keep it a secret.
One of the things that my brother-in-law said to me was, “Don't ever tell anybody.” If I ever tell -- if -- “I'm going to leave -- I'm going to leave you here. Don't you ever tell anybody. If you tell anybody,” he says, “I'll kill you. I'm going to come back and I'll kill you.” You know, as a kid -- as a young kid you keep those secrets and you really believe them, and for me I kept his story, I kept my story secret, you know, and I didn't -- I didn't allow -- I didn't want anybody to know what happened to me out there. The things that he did to me. The deals that I made to survive because I felt responsible. I felt responsible because I felt like I played it over and over in my head I play that I had every opportunity to jump out of that car when we were going. I should have opened up that door and rolled out of the car. You know. That's what I -- and then I used to blame myself, well, I shouldn't have got in the car when I knew I shouldn't have gotten in. I blamed myself for everything.

And for the times that my biological sister was mean to me, my biological family was mean to me I allowed it to happen because I felt responsible for what happened to me -- that what I had caused him. And I protected him and I protected -- and you know, allowed the abuse to go on, even from my own family. Because I was considered an outcast too, by my biological family. I Lillian Cook wasn't accepted. I was different. I was also disconnected -- disconnected. I didn't feel I belonged, so it was -- so you know, and that's how -- that's how it was for me.

And for the longest time I drank lots -- lots of drinking, have to -- I can't go to sleep without being drunk. You know, I had to have that. It's the only way I would sleep because if I don't think then I'm going to be seeing everything again and feeling everything, and I didn't want that. I just wanted just to be -- just knock out -- and just be knocked out and that was it.

So that's what happened and you know, and then -- you know, and then things started happening to me and you know, I wound up having cancer -- I'm a cancer survivor. And so a lot of that stuff resurfaced when I -- when I had breast cancer. And one of the things that happens, and I knew I had to revisit that because I'd buried it and I kept things so secret for so long, was when I had to undress for the -- you know, for the -- not only do you have to do the mammogram, but once the mammogram is done you got to see the doctor and the doctor wants to examine you. So there's the biopsy that happens, well you have to -- you can't be wearing a bra -- wearing a -- going through a biopsy. When he examines you, so I had that and I was pushing everything down as much as I could but then when I would be re-triggered was when I'd go up for surgery.
the night before surgery. I had a mastectomy and a hysterectomy. My surgery was 18 hours long. So my uterus was also taken out along with my -- my breast.

And when I stood there -- I was up against the wall because the doctor has to take pictures of you, so he had his nurse -- he had his camera, my husband was there. And so you're in your gown, and I just had my pants on, you know, and -- but I had to go up with no bra on, you know, and just with this white coat -- or this white little paper thing that you have to wear, and I stood up against there and he says, Well, I have to take pictures of you, and then once I take pictures of you then I have to draw -- I have to draw the markings for where we have to do -- where we have to -- where I have to make the incisions, where -- you know, and all that.

Okay, so I'll all right with that, but when I would be triggered is when I actually took off the -- the -- the white little paper down and then he says, “Can you lift up your breast this way?” And I burst into tears. And then he's says, “What's wrong?” And -- and then he says -- he says -- “You'll be okay. You'll be okay. You'll be fine.” He says, “I just need you to lift up your breast,” and he says, “And can you pull your breast this way?” Because there's certain ways that you have to stand, certain -- because he needs those camera shots, and I burst into tears, and I said, “I can't do it,” and I broke down. You know, and I was -- and then he says, “What is wrong?” And then he came to me and he held me. That was my doctor, and him and I became very good friends. And he looked after me and all the way through -- even after post surgery he and I became very good friends. And was of him was how I become -- do a lot of the volunteer work back home. But I was re-triggered by it because of what I had to do, because of what happened to be in the bush with my brother-in-law, because of the things that I had to do for him and the doctor was asking me do basically do the same thing, you know.

So I did a lot of work -- I believe I did a lot of work in terms of healing myself. Doing -- going to ceremony -- you know, and just praying -- you know, and just looking after myself, and that was one of the things that my doctor said to me is, “That you need to look after yourself.” “Oh, my gosh,” is what he used to say to me -- “Oh my gosh.” You know, and so I did. You know, I did a lot of stuff. I did lots of yoga, lots of ceremony -- going to that, meditating. And going into the bush by myself. That was -- that was scary, but I did it. And -- and just being aware of my surroundings because I was afraid because I -- you know, when I was taken out there -- twice I was taken out there. You know, and each time I lost all coordination, each time. And each time I was always lost. So I had to make sure that when I was in the bush that I knew my surroundings and that I'd be okay.

So that's some of the things that I did to take care of me. And I started journaling. I started doing all kinds of things, you know, looking after myself. You know, going to group therapy, all kinds of -- but what I found -- and I felt better, is when I went to older women, my grandmothers, and they were part of my healing and you know, and I knew I had -- I knew I had to do certain things to look after myself. And I know I had to re-visit that trauma. I knew I had to re-visit each time -- the -- the rapes that that I'd gone through, I knew I had to re-visit that, and I knew I had to heal that part where I blamed myself for even being raped, because I blamed myself.

I mean I was 12 years old, but what -- you know, I -- I for the longest time I thought -- because he said, “Look at what you did to me. You made me do this.” I was 12, what could I do to him? He was a married man. An adult married man, but he blamed me, you know.

And for the longest time I had to forgive myself for that and tell myself that that wasn't my fault, that I was never in a position of power, that he was in the position of power at all times. I -- I wasn't. I was 12 years old. And what 12-year-old has power over a -- a man?
So I had to tell myself, no, that I wasn't at fault. And I had to quit blaming myself for that, and I had to quit blaming myself for the things -- the acts that I had to do in that bush to survive. I had to forgive myself for that.
But I had to, and you know, that's what I tell myself, but you had to -- you had to survive, so I did. You know, and so I've done quite a bit of stuff for -- in terms of trying to heal myself and heal those little broken pieces of me every -- all over the place here.

But I came across -- like I said, grandmothers, and the two grandmothers -- they're both deceased now, these first two that I encounter, and we went into the bush and we had a -- we had a fire. I had masonry jars. We had -- and we had tea and we had bannock and we had baloney and we sat around the fire, and then I had cedar, and I had tobacco, and a journal.

And I said, "I need to get rid of some stuff
-- some stuff that happened to me." I said, "I was raped and I need to get rid of this stuff." So -- and that's how some of the things that we did -- like the grandmothers helped me through that, was as I was writing and as I was crying and doing whatever it is that I needed to do. I told them, "If I'm yelling, if I scream, I don't want to scare you, but don't come to me just let me do it." And then they said, “Okay.” We -- and then what -- what was surprising was what the grandmothers said to me was, “Okay. We've been raped too.”

You know, and as I was writing I remember the grandmothers would get up take turns -- get up and burn -- burn the tobacco and burn the cedar. And that's what helped me, because I found that when I was going for therapy with counselling people there was a time limit. I have half an hour, I've got 40 minutes and that's all we have. I've got another person to see, so I didn't get a chance to get rid of all the stuff that I had inside. But being with those grandmothers and being by an open fire and being outside that's what helped me.

You know, and so there was a lot of that, that -- that kind of therapy by the older -- older ladies that were not qualified, that didn't have a degree. They were just grandmothers from back home who had been victimized as well. But they knew how to look after me, you know, and that's what they did.

You know, and I remember when I was crying -- sitting there crying and -- and you know, and bawling my eyes out and finally one of them gets up and she comes and gives me some -- some -- in a masonry jar, some tea because we didn't have no water, but she gave me some tea. And she says, “(Speaking Native language) you know, here, drink something.” And then she sat back down. And she didn't touch me, and that's all I needed because I didn't want anybody to interfere. I just -- I just didn't want to me touched. I didn't want that. I wanted to be alone. Alone in this, you know.

So -- so from there, you know, I got better by them and just getting all that love that I -- that grandmothers can give, and I got it, you know, and everything that I missed, the grandmothers gave me that.

So what happens is that during my journey or you know, my healing, I went to -- a little girl is murdered in Sagkeeng, and this little girl -- I go to her funeral, and that's Tina Fontaine -- I go to her funeral. And I couldn't believe the media circus, and then the church was just full and people -- and the cameras were just taking pictures of the -- in the front row the family sitting there, and I wanted to say something, but I was scared of my own people. I was scared of my own Band, and I was scared of my own Chief and council, to throw me out for telling the media, like, to back off, leave them alone. I was scared of that because I'd make a scene for sure, so I sat back down as a coward.

Again, I always felt, I knew it, I knew where I went. I -- I automatically I knew so it never left me. But I tried to bury it because that's what I was good at.
I could bury things and so it never left me. So it got to the point where I couldn't really sleep because it was -- the guilt was just -- was just ugly, and so I just got up and I went and seen -- knocked on Thelma's door. She thought I was CFS first thing. She thought I was CFS. And then -- but anyways we talked. And then from there that's where I said to her that, "I'm sorry. I'm very sorry that I didn't stand up for you in -- in the church. I'm really sorry that I -- I was a coward that I didn't pick -- that I didn't defend you and that I didn't protect your family.
Because I could do that. I said I could protect you, but I
-- but I didn't. Instead I said I coward -- I was a coward and I'm so sorry. But whatever it is that you need I'm here for you." I said, "And I'm help you with whatever it that you need I'm -- I'm here for you." And she said, "Okay. Okay." And she called me -- she called me many times she called me and I'd go over when she couldn't sleep.

You know, and from there I connected her with another grandmother, which was Jeanette (ph), and you know, I talk with Jeanette and I asked her questions -- I met Jeanette actually years before, she told me about her granddaughter, Vanessa (ph), who had gone missing, who was killed, and told me about what happened to Vanessa.

And then prior to that I even met a -- another grandmother who went hitchhiking all the time. I picked her up hitchhiking, she was like 80, grey hair, a little granny you know, and hitchhiking, but I knew her, that was my aunt. And she said -- I said, “Why are you hitchhiking? Why -- why -- like -- what's -- like what are you doing that for?” Because you know, I didn't want -- I -- I didn't want to hitchhike because I knew what would happen -- you what happens had you get -- when you hitchhike.

So she says, “I'm looking for my daughter. My daughter went missing.” She says, “This is her.” She says, “Have you seen her?” And then you know, and we started talking and she says -- she's travelled the States already -- this little old lady, she travelled the States, so she says, “I like getting rides with truck drivers. Truck drivers go all over.” She says, “And I give them a picture of my -- my daughter. I've even gone to --” she says, “To B.C. on a -- on a -- with trucks. I go to all the truck stops,” she says, “I don't -- I don't get a car. I make sure I get on with truck drivers and I talk to them to them if they'll find my daughter, help me bring her home.”

So I met her first, but I didn't tie anything together because she was my biological aunt, so I wasn't close to her and I didn't really know her. So you know, I meet her, and then I met Jeanette, and then I met -- you know, Thelma so from there we just -- you know, and then -- but I got to two grandmothers together and -- and from there you know -- you know, I just got them together.

And -- and then one of things that -- I was actually eavesdropping in their conversation, I was asked to go make some tea, so I made tea for -- for them. So I with was in the kitchen making tea and I was eavesdropping and they were talking about one of the grandmas was really worried about her granddaughter not being found. That they're going to forget her granddaughter. And she says, “They're going to forget Vanessa. Nobody's going to remember her. She'll be forgotten,” and then you know, and I can hear the conversation, “Well, we can't let that happen,” is what the other grandmother is saying, “We can't let that happen. We have to -- they have to be remembered.
What can we do?”

And then they said, “Lillian, come here.” So I went and -- and they said, “You know, what about a headstone? Can we have a monument? Can we have something?
Can we have a -- where we can -- so the people won't forget them.” So they gave me -- well, one of them gives me all -- you know, the cards and where the headstones -- you know, who's ever -- you know, all these companies and here she says, “You know, take this,” and then the other grandma who asked me to come by her place and she'll dig up for -- dig up hers, so that's basically how this all starts.

And then from there I met other grandmothers, and some of them even come to me and from the six -- there's actually six grandmothers and we -- and all -- and those grandmothers they all lost a loved one. There's 17 murdered and missing from Sagkeeng -- 17 murdered and missing women and girls. And you know, and I met all 16 (sic) families, except for one, one I couldn't see. And I chose not to. But 16 of them I've met and we've sat in circles, I've had little sharing circles with the grandmas.
And eventually the families would come.

A lot of this stuff that I've done, and that we've done is just volunteer. I'm just so fortunate to have very good -- very good women who -- who are very supportive, who think that we have to have -- we have to start doing something at home.

And so what we started was just like little sharing circles and -- and, but aside from hearing the grandmothers share their stories of their -- of their loved one and how they -- what happened to them, I've heard the stories of how they were murdered, and the stories of when the police don't take their stories seriously that they're just considered runaways, that they're considered prostitutes, those kinds of stories I've heard, as I sat in the circle. And it got to the point where with we actually had a mom who lost her son. She asked if she could get that support and be with the grandmothers, so I said, “Okay. Come.” You know, and she come and sit with the grandmothers.

And the grandmothers, each of them have a role, and I was like their gopher because, that's what I said to them. “I survived. I could have died. But I -- but I survived for a reason.” So I thought, well, I owe them. I owe them something.

These grandmothers are searching for their loved one. They're searching for closure. What can I do as a Band member? As a community member? What can I do? How can I -- how can I help them, and I felt because I survived -- I felt obligated and I felt I had to do something for them. And that's what I told them.

They know my story. You know, and I told them, “I survived but your granddaughters didn't and I'll do whatever it that I can to help you.” And I -- and so I became their advocate. I became their little gopher, whatever it is that they need, I'm there. You know. We've done a lot of things, but everything, like I said, is volunteer.

A lot of times I was on social assistance and I would take them one time we took them to a -- or I took them to -- there was a private screening for missing and murdered women in Winnipeg, and I took two of the grandmothers there, you know, and -- and -- and you know, it was the first time you know, Knowella (ph) -- one of the grandmothers cried. You know, and she never cried before and there she was you know, and -- and so those kinds of things you know, I'm so grateful for, for knowing them and for them helping me and for them teaching me. One of the things that I learned from them was to be patient. You know, you have to be patient. And you know, and -- and -- but they taught me so much. They taught me much more than that.

You know. Like I said, like those grandmothers each of them have a different -- they had different roles, one of them was -- was really -- I was really close to her, I wound up being very close to her and I seen her angry, you know, and trying to advocate for support from our own leadership, for the things that we needed, the things that they needed, what needed to be done.

And one of the -- the things that made it -- made them angry and that upset them and that hurt them, and I've seen that anger now I've went to, you know, our own leadership when they were at the state that they needed things from their community -- from my community, and it Lillian Cook was never given. Not only do not get the support that we were supposed to get like from -- like when I listen to the stories of -- of the families back home, but they don't get the support from -- from the police. They don't -- you know, they're neglected. But you know, they don't get it. They don't get that -- that don't get it from -- from the leadership at all too.

And one of the things why I decided to share my story was you know, was because of what I endured and how I come across -- like how I came across these grandmothers and how I managed to -- you know, work with the 17 families. There was only one family that I didn't work with. You know, but -- and then I've worked with the other -- with the men, you know, their -- their -- their families. And it's a lot of work. It's a lot of work. And it's a lot -- very costly too, when you're -- when you're just a volunteer -- a community member, but we don't get the support.

Four years ago the grandmothers wanted a walk, that's what they wanted, "We want a walk," but they're -- you know what, they're in wheelchairs, and some of them are not only in wheelchairs, but they're in walkers. And they wanted to walk so bad and I was trying my best to convince them not walk. We don't need to walk, well, let's do some of the things. We need to walk. We have to walk. And not one community organization came to help the grandmothers as they walked from the catholic church to the powwow grounds -- none. Nobody came. But the grandmothers loved it. We went into the arbor. The grass -- nobody even cut the grass. I even asked, “Can you cut the grass?” Nobody cut the grass.

But the grandmothers made do so inside there was a center and -- and we got some flowers you know, and so there was flowers on four -- four you know, well four doorways, we'll say, and inside we had lawn chairs that we put and -- but prior to that the grandmothers -- we fundraised to bring some healing to them because we don't get the support -- the families don't get the support from the health centre. The families don't support from these other agencies and organizations. That's not true. Because the grandmas have raised -- the families have raised the money on themselves.

And what we -- and what we were able to do was have a flower ceremony for them. And the flower ceremony has to do with the flowers and the water and there's some songs and they got fanning the flowers are the ones that fan the families, you know, and -- and it was so nice, but the grandmothers paid for somebody to come and -- and even for the food -- like things like that that were done that night, that was covered, you know, and -- but you know, but the community I suppose did help, but mind you, they didn't show up. But there was food that was donated. That was --and they would send somebody to just bring the food, but no -- we didn't have no -- nobody come. Nobody came, the grandmothers were alone. The families were alone.

And you know, and that was on June 21st that they had their walk. And it was so powerful to see because like one of them, like, she was in a walker, and the other one was in a wheelchair, and the grandma -- she was in her wheelchair, and you know, and they bring her close to the powwow arbor and she's with her husband and her husband is holding her, you know, and -- and she says out loud, “No, (speaking Native language), I'm going to walk.” She got up from her wheelchair, her legs were shaking, her body was just trembling, and she walked to the arbor.

And you know, and I couldn't believe all these old ladies pushing their walkers down that road -- down to that dirt road they pushed their walkers and there were and they made it. And some of them with their -- one of them -- had her tank -- her breathing tank and she was walking you know, and just witnessing that I was -- it was so strong and just couldn't believe what -- what they did, and they were so happy, you know.

And there they had a blanket ceremony -- we had a blanket ceremony for them. They also had -- that's where they had a sacred fire too, and they burnt their -- their tobacco ties and had a you know, a spirit plate, they each made a spirit plate on their own. It wasn't made for them. It was specific for their own family. They made their own spirit plate for their loved one and they then took it to the fire. And they walked to that fire, and I've never seen that before. Other than that, they're always on their wheelchairs or they're pushing their walkers. You know, and it's so amazing to see that, but you know, we do try -- we did try so hard, and it is so hard to go against the way people are conditioned to be. Because back home we don't get that support -- the grandmothers don't get the support, mind you, you see it on media. They have the opportunity to be there and they're up front saying we need to do this. We need to do that.
Hearing - Public

One of the things that the grandmothers wanted was -- was -- was to have their stories shared, but they also wanted support, that's what the grandmothers want is support. They wanted support for their -- for their extended families to get counselling. They wanted support for some -- for a team to go in to help them -- to help the families because the grandmas were already in a better state.

Four years I've worked with them, for years we sat like this in a little circle, and these little old ladies -- and so they were at a different state, but the younger ones weren't. There was a lot of anger. A lot of -- you know, there's a lot of energy, you know, and so they were different, but they wanted that support.

But how do we get our own organizations from back home -- how do we get them to give the families support when the organizations say “No, we don't want to do that. Oh, God no, send them somewhere else.” That's what the families get. And that's the truth.

One of the things that I found hard -- like even what I just shared with you, was my own truth. My own story about what happened to me. Same thing with the grandmothers, it's really hard for them to get their truth out, and it's really hard to talk about the truth. It's hard when you have to say, but it's also hard for somebody to hear your truth because they don't want to hear your honesty. And that's from me from my own leadership, it's hard for them to accept to hear what they've done and how they don't to support.

One of the things that I've asked for the families -- like I've tried to fundraise. They shut down the fundraising. They said, “There's absolutely no fundraising. You can't do that.” You know. There was even a threat of people losing their jobs, that happened.
If they help me or help the families or help the grandmas.
"No, absolutely no fundraising you're going to have to do this on your own, but without fundraising."

So we're bullied like that. The grannies are bullied like that. The families are bullied like that.
You know, but that's the truth. That's not a lie.

What you see on media, what they do is that they're upfront and they're saying they're going to provide all these -- I wish. The families wish. When there was that -- when they had a walk a few -- a few weeks ago. A couple of weeks ago. Three of the families come to see (indiscernible) at my house and I sat with one of -- one of the -- one of Tina's aunts at home and we watched it on media. We watched it on -- we watched it on -- in her living room, watching the news. One of the things the family said was, "Why are they over there when we're here?" You know, "Why did our leadership have to go to Winnipeg and go to the legislator and say, "Hey, we're in -- we don't want this. This has got to stop. The violence has to stop." But their families were grieving at home.

The families were all left -- all 17 of them were at home. Both from the north shore and from the south shore. But, hey, our -- they went, they -- they took off.
You know, but for the rest of them -- like one of the families -- not really 17, so 16 of them went -- I mean 16 of them remained, one family goes, but not all of them.

You know, when we watched everything unfold on TV and -- and what was -- what triggered the families was just the unresolved stuff. The lack of support, the lack of services. Not from -- like the Inquiry here, but just from the support from home. Where is the counselling? Where is the sacred fires? Where is that team to help the families? Where is that when the grannies -- you know, one of the things I asked and I was told, "No, you can't do that, just take them to a sweat." I said. "The grandmothers --" so that's why we fundraised, to have the -- the flower ceremony, to bring somebody over, and to have the feast for them and then to have the walk.

You know, one of the things that the council told me at that time was, "Why do you want to do that? Just take them." That's what I -- that I was -- I was so hurt, I couldn't believe I was actually -- I couldn't believe it. I still don't. And even when I tell people today, they're like, "Oh, my -- are you serious?" "Well, yes."

One of the things I -- I said was -- well, I was confronted that this was happening. That you know, "What are you doing? You shouldn't be doing this. You know, you shouldn't be -- I should be doing this." Is what the council said to me. "I should be doing -- they should be doing this." "Well, go ahead." I did say that. I even passed tobacco. "Go ahead, do it."

But aside from that what was said to me was,
"Why do you want to do this? Why do you want to do that flower ceremony? You don't need to do the flower ceremony.
Like what -- what the hell is that?" That's actually I was told, "What the hell is that? And why do you need to do that blanket -- like what's -- what's with the blanket ceremony? What do you need to do that for? Why don't you just take them to the sweat? There are sweats here. Let them do the sweat. What about those sun dances? Take them to those sun dances. You can take them there."

"Some of them are 80 years old and they're in a walker and they're in a wheelchair, you want me to take them into a sweat lodge? You want them to go into a sun dance? Like what are you thinking?" And that's what I said. So we did the work, you know, we did a lot of the work by ourselves, but that's just -- that's the truth.

In our -- in -- in my language we say debwewin, debwewin is -- is truth, and it's so hard to tell the truth. Because nobody likes the truth. My leadership doesn't like me telling the truth. My leadership doesn't like hearing the grandmas tell their truth, but you know what we have to be silenced. We're always being silenced.
The grandmothers are being silenced.
How can we do prevention? I always say anybody can pick up a sign -- any one of us can pick up a sign and say, I want justice. I can run around outside and say I want justice, but what about action? What can you do? As a leader back home -- that's what I -- that's what I says, as a leader what can you do as a leader to bring some resolution to help the families? What can you do to prevent another young girl being killed? Another young girl being raped? A child being murdered? What can you do? How can you protect our young men? How can you protect our young men?

Like the one who raped me, how can you help him? You know, how can you help another person not be like him? How can you do that? By holding a sign and say I want justice? Absolutely not. Not for me. Doesn't work for me.

What I say is those young girls -- 17 missing and murdered in Sagkeeng, well, that's just one community, we're not from all over, we're just like -- that's just us. That's not even including the men that -- and the boys that have been victimized -- that have been murdered. You know, what do we do?

So one of the things -- well, our young girls -- you know, our leadership always say, “Well, it's the government's responsibility. It's their fiduciary responsibility for them to protect our people. It's their responsibility. They have to do it.”

But am I responsible -- but is the government responsible for looking after my own children? I have two sons. Are they responsible for looking after my sons and to raise my sons? No, it's my responsibility. So what I say to the -- my leadership at home is this -- it's your responsibility. It's not about you picking up your sign and being in front of the camera. No. What it means is this, you have 17 missing murdered women and girls from Sagkeeng. So how do you prevent that?

You take a look at what we have today. You take a look at -- we just had a -- you know, a few years -- well, maybe about three years ago, four years ago, four years ago we had -- I forget her name now, my -- my memory's going here, but we had this young -- we had this young First Nation woman from Saskatoon or Saskatchewan, and she won -- like she won this beauty contest, right, and so she's known all across Canada. She's known all over the place, you know. And she's -- so what does that say?
Okay, so there's a role model there.

So what do we do? How do we protect our young girls? Should we -- you know, our -- I know my -- my home territory all they want is teachers and social workers. Oh, my gosh, do we have ever lots. We have so much and we have so many teacher assistants you wouldn't believe. But is that saving our young girls?

Can our young girls -- you know, there's social media today, it's you know, and I think why can't they -- our Chief and council, our leaders, our big leaders, like AMC, you know, and all these other areas, and even our national Chief, why can't they just push or guide those Chiefs and say, you know what you have a lot of young people there. Why don't you just protect your girls and how you protect your girls -- why don't you just bring some courses back home. Have some courses back home, save your girls. Don't tend them to Winnipeg. Don't send them to the big cities. What about having some courses at home? Something to do with hair? What about hair? What about make-up? What about doing nails for manicures, pedicures? Can -- can that work for a reserve? Can these young girls get the training? Can these girls actually make a living so that they don't fall victim to violence? You know, can they become therapists -- like massage therapists? Is that possible for our young girls? Could we actually do that kind of training on the reserves?

What about how do we protect our young men?
And how do we protect our young women? Can our men actually protect our young women? Well, it what about if they go into policing? I was thinking do the police have a lot of -- you know, lack of responsibility, a lack of interest in terms of murdered and missing women, you know when our young girls go missing, our young boys go missing the police don't take it seriously. So how do we protect them? How do we do? Why don't educate our young boys?
Hearing - Public
Lillian Cook

Why don't they go into the policing? How do we support them to get that? Can we bring that -- maybe pre-training to the communities? Can they be taught a little bit of their language? Can they be taught about colonization, Indian residential school? Can they have that incorporated? Can they be trained to actually honour women and girls? Can they learn that? And who can teach them?
What about our Elders? Can they take them to the land a little bit? Can they take the men -- these young boys out to the land? These young recruits?

When my dad took me out on the lake to pick wild rice, one of the things my dad said to me was -- because I was 12 and there was lots of stuff going on at Lone Island, and all the families went out, you know, except for the kids, I don't even know who watched the kids. We're always alone. But one of the things that they did was -- was leave us behind and somebody went up that big rock at Lone Island, we're not supposed to go on the rock, everybody knew not to go on the rock, but apparently some kids went on the rock and meant everybody was now in trouble, including me. I didn't even go on the rock. I was too scared to go on the rock. Because one of the things my parents said was (speaking Native language), which means don't go there. The little people live there. You don't want to disturb them. Well, I didn't want to encounter no little people back then, so I didn't -- stayed clear from the rock and we all did. But apparently somebody was up on the rock and adults seen this and so now I was in trouble. As much -- I remember begging and whining not to get up so early in the morning but I was taken on to the lake. My dad put me on the canoe, he was paddling -- he was going to paddle, I sat in the back. I had these two sticks. I was going to trash the rice. And I saw my dad hold tobacco -- I never heard his prayer, nothing, I'd -- yeah -- I'm be lying if I said I heard his prayer. I didn't hear him pray. I just seen him holding it for a bit and then he put it in the water and he went. And I was trying to pick, and you know, and one of the things I heard older people -- and I so embarrassed, but older people were saying, "Oh, no, there's somebody out there, just breaking that rice, just hurting that rice." That's because you know, that's what they say in the language, hey, you know, and "They're breaking that rice. Oh, it must be a young one. It must be a young one on that lake --" like, because you don't know anything when you're young, I guess, and so that was me, and they came to check me out, check out this kid that was breaking all the rice, and so by noon because I was starving, my dad already knew that I wasn't a picker. So he said, “You're going to paddle.” So he put me on the canoe.

And this is what I always think about our young men, they have to honour our young women and how do we teach our young men to be men to take care of the women? You know they say women are water carriers, but we also have to teach our men. And my dad taught me that. You know, and one of the things that he did was -- when I was pouting, because I was pouting because I didn't -- I asked my dad, “Where do I go?” “(Speaking Native language) I don't know,” is what he said. “Like, where do I go, Dad?” “I don't know.” And then I said, “Dad, do I go this way?” “(Speaking Native language) I don't know.” Or, “Well, this way?” “(Speaking Native language) you know,” and so those are some of the things he said and so what -- what I did was I -- anyway I pouted, I got mad. I took a little bit of a temper tantrum in the canoe, and he was always so quiet and kind and gentle, never said a word. He just sat in the back smoking.

And so finally what happens is that after I take -- for a very long time I'm going to try -- I try to you know, out time him, I guess, you know, I was going to make sure that he would bow down to me, that I -- that he'd paddle me around, but that didn't happen. And then finally he says to me, “Well, if you would just be quiet and just listen,” he says, “The water will -- the water will teach you, the wind will teach you,” he said, “And the rice will teach you.” He says it in the language.

And I'm 12 years old. Or that -- or 11 years old and I'm thinking -- I just thought it was ridiculous, and then I took another tantrum, I remember taking another tantrum and -- and he didn't say nothing. He just let me get mad and didn't give me heck, nothing -- my dad was nothing like that. And he was quiet, you know, always quiet.

And so finally after my pouting and then -- then I felt something. And I felt the wind. And I'll always remember feeling that wind, so when I go outside you know and I feel it, and I felt the wind touch my cheek, not all over I -- you know, I didn't feel all -- I touched -- and felt it. It was just a small little piece of touch and then I looked and then I could hear the water. I heard the water like my dad said, “Well, listen to the water.” I heard the water slap the canoe. It was so loud it was (unreportable sound) like that, and then I saw the waves, and the waves were going, and then I saw the wild rice, that's how it was going. That's what it was doing. And so I picked up my -- my paddle and I paddled in the direction the rice was going, the way the water was going, and I went and I went into that rice field and I heard my dad pick -- I heard him thrashing the rice, (unreportable sound) like that, so it was my first time making $50 that night, but -- that day, but anyways, but that's what I mean.

Our young men need know those kinds of things and who else better to teach them than our -- than our Elders -- than our men -- our older men can take the younger men out. How to be respectful. How to listen to those kinds of things in nature. How to be quiet. How to be still. That way, if they go into policing, that's -- because that's my hope, that's the only way I think we're going to start giving that sensitivity if something happens to our young women or something happens to our -- our young men and when you go to the police that way your men -- our own men, our Native men, will have that kindness and maybe will do a proper investigation, but they need to be taught by our Elders. We need to put them in those policing. We need to put them in those kinds of environment, that's the only way we can make change. That's what I think.

Because just believing on -- our holding up signs saying we need justice, I'm just thinking like okay, the Commissioner is going to do everything herself. She's going to protect all of us. It's not going to happen. We have to look after ourselves, but we have to come up with ways of how do we it? How do we -- how do we -- how do we protect our young ones? How do we protect our people? But those -- that's -- that's what I -- that's the only thing that I can come up with because of mine own experience.

Nobody's been there really to help me. I've really had to help myself in terms of trying to find healing. In terms of reaching out, but who better to help me was old ladies. Little old ladies. You know, they didn't have a degree. They didn't have anything like that.
And my dad, he was 72, he couldn't even speak any English, and he was going blind, but who else taught me?

You know, so that's -- you know, that's -- that's what I feel and that's the only way I think we'll protect our -- our young ones, is if that -- we give them something. Not -- not all necessarily push them towards always it become a social worker, pushing them towards education, or to become a lawyer, because we have a bunch of lawyers too, at home. So we -- you know we need -- how do we make them -- maybe they're not all lawyers. Maybe they're not all teachers, but we can't force them because that's part of colonization. That's part of the whole intergenerational trauma. That's part of Indian residential school. We have to break out of that. And make room for openness.
What can we do with this younger generation? How do we keep them safe? So for me that's what I think -- how these young girls today they just love to fix their hair. They love going to get their nails done. You always see them with their nails -- especially back home, that's what they like to do is show off their nails. Well, for me when I look at that, I think they're telling me something. This is what I want. This is what I want to do. And how do we become self -- how do we get that self antonymy again? By pushing everybody towards social workers? By being teachers? No, they need something else. They need to nurture their own spirit, that's part of who we are. We weren't all -- you know, in our own -- like, thinking back a long time ago, everybody had a different responsibility you know, and to look after the community.

And those young people they need to look after their own. You know, they're the next generation and they need to look after a younger generation. And so we need to take care of ourselves and that's where you know, that's -- that's my message is that and that's just by working with the grandmothers and what -- what they want. They want walks. They want a monument.

You know, that's something that they wanted -- remember I mentioned that they wanted a headstone. These two little old ladies wanted a headstone. So one of my helpers, there's another lady that likes -- that helps me all the time and I'm so glad because I'd be falling apart all the time -- mind you I fall apart lots of time in front of the grandmothers because I feel like I failure because I can't get anywhere. I can't get the help and the resources that I want for them.

So -- and -- so what we do -- so what we did was -- anyway she saw something on -- on the internet, and she saw -- she came across a monument that was done in Saskatoon -- in Saskatchewan, and it was Lionel Peyachew's work. And then there was another one that was done in Ontario, and it was a young girl that was killed, you know, and she was an activist, and her name was Shannon (ph), I can't pronounce her last name, so anyway and then I thought well, okay, let's do this, so I got all the families together, and we all sat in a big circle.

And I did a lot of research, I had to track down Lionel Peyachew and I couldn't get a hold of him. But I contacted the detachment. This the Saskatchewan police detachment and I talked to the corporal -- I talked to the staff sergeant, and then I the corporal and they both told me the story about how the fancy shawl dancing monument would -- came about, and the story behind it that the girl that that's dancing was actually a fancy shawl dancer and she was considered one of missing and murdered.
And the police -- they told me, was that they felt responsible for her death because they didn't believe the family. They didn't believe the family when the family came to them and told them that this young girl was missing. And they basically shoed them away. And so when they found her dead, you know -- and then there was another incident he was telling me that happened and that was when that same time the young girl goes missing, there was a young man that was incarcerated and so at around midnight is when the police took him out of -- out of jail, out of his cell and they brought him to the Manitoba border and he froze to death. He didn't have anything, he wasn't -- he didn't have any winter clothes, nothing, the police just took him out and just left him there to freeze. So there was an outrage, he said, and so there was a lot of changes right after that, like right after those two incidents and so they had to try and make amends to the -- to the communities.

So they -- they had $50,000, is what he said, so they had $50,000 in their pot, and what they wanted to do is donate towards some kind of monument for the family if the family is willing, and so then they -- so then from there they talked with the province and then a lot of stuff happened, so anyway the monument comes up to about $200,000 to do the fancy shawl dancer. So they connect me to a liaison that worked with the families from Saskatchewan, so I talked with him and he guided me as to what I needed to do, and then he told me that there was two artists in Canada, one of them was Lionel Peyachew, the one that was doing the one in Saskatoon, and he said and the one -- he says that was in Manitoba, he said, “In your own home, in your home area,” so I -- you know, he told me, he says, “You can find him in --” he says, “I believe he’s still working at the University of Manitoba if you'd like to find him.” He says, “Because Lionel won't be finished until 2017.” And I thought oh, my gosh, that's -- the grandmas will never -- will -- you know, they -- they want it now. And so he said, so I -- I contacted the -- the U of M. From U of M they told me where I'd find him. He left his job, so he was now in Peguis. So his name is Wayne Stranger, and that's who I contacted and I talked to him for a bit and he said that he would be -- told him the story and I told him how many Sagkeeng has, you know, murdered and missing woman, so he decided, from our conversation, that he would come out to Sagkeeng and meet with the families. He wanted to meet with the families so I had to organize that and so we did. We organized this big circle, a couple of ladies and I -- actually it was just the two of us after one of the ladies had a bad flu and doesn't show up so there was two of us, and we had this big circle. So on PowerPoint I presented Lionel's work with the fancy shawl dancer and the one in Saskatoon, but also a regular headstone that they wanted you know, but that didn't sit well with the families that were -- who had families (sic) that were missing. They said a headstone is -- means they're dead. And they weren't ready to accept a headstone, and they didn't want that headstone.

So -- so I was lucky -- very fortunate that I had the two -- the -- the fancy shawl dancer and -- you know, from Saskatoon and from Ontario, there on PowerPoint for them to look at and oh, they loved it.

I even showed them the one in Manitoba that -- that's at The Forks there, they -- you know, but what they fell in love with was the fancy shawl dancer. So up on screen that's one of Lionel's -- not Lionel -- Wayne's work, he brings that in to show the families, it's a hundred -- it weighs a hundred pounds and it's an eagle -- a bronze eagle. And so when the families saw the fancy shawl dancer and the one in Ontario, they -- this one -- this is Lionel's work from Saskatchewan, so they fell in love with her. And then they fell in love with Lionel's -- I mean with Wayne's work, with the eagle, and this is the one from Saskatoon -- I mean from Ontario.

So right there the families decided, no, we're going to do this. We want this, and how much is it going to cost? So I already knew how much it would cost, or I assumed how much it was going to cost, what it cost you know, the other province. So Wayne said a hundred thousand. He gave me a price earlier, but after meeting with the families it dropped to a hundred thousand and I was so happy. I was so happy because of what I was told Saskatchewan why it was so expensive because of the rebar, because of this, because of that, the bronzing, the piecing, everything put together, you know. And then the shipment -- having to ship it from here to there because you can't do the bronzing there, you've got to set the bronzing here, that -- the cost of that, going over the border, coming back from the border, all this was like, oh my gosh, so it was all adding up. So when -- after hearing that, so I wasn't surprised, but when I was really surprised when Wayne said a hundred thousand. So I was really happy, and the families were of course, you know, they didn't care, they just wanted -- they just wanted this monument.

So -- but it came -- that idea came from the grandmothers. It was them. You know, four years I worked with those grandmothers, not only myself, but a couple of other ladies, there was like three of us always working with these grandmothers, and it was because of them that they always wanted something for the families. What they wanted was they wanted a -- they -- well, they wanted some place that they could remember their loved one, they wanted a place where they can go -- they can grieve in silence, where they can go and think of and go and offer whatever it is that they wanted to do to provide their little offerings, or just to sit and talk to the monument.

You know, and so they did that, not me. All I did was pick up the phone and I just did the chattering, that's all I did. Everything is them. You know, and then -- so the decision was made what kind -- what -- because we don't want her to look -- the monument that you're looking at -- we don't want it to look identical to the two provinces, what is it that you want?

Well, one of the girls that was -- that's -- that's murdered in Sagkeeng's missing and murdered is -- was a jingle dress dancer, and so we thought, well, okay, from there, let's -- let's do it that way. So we talked with Wayne, or I talked with Wayne and told him, it possible to do this? He says, Sure. Anything that you want. Like how does she want it to look. So the families -- I have no influence with the families, like this is made out of -- like plasticine, and he did it quickly with plasticine because the families wanted to see something quick, and for their approval. And so he had to do it very -- very fast, he said, so anyway, so you see the two ties, and the two ties they're going to be a rose, it's going to be a rose, and it will be made of bronze, she'll stand six feet tall and plus she'll be taller than that because she'll be on a base. So the ties is one of the girls' names, is Rose (ph). Okay, so her name is on there. And she'll be wearing a headband, you know, and that headband will have -- is what represents some of the -- some of the men that have been murdered and missing. Being the warriors, so that little bit of the details, so there's going to be a fish on there because he was a fisherman -- one of them that's missing. And the other one you know, is a young boy who was working on his pipe before he was killed, so that's on there, so there's so little symbols are going to be on her. And -- and she's holding a scarf, but the scarf also represents the murdered and missing men. You know, like we were thinking like, how are we going to because the missing and murdered men they have the -- they have those little red -- those red ties that men wear. So how can we do this, so the old traditional dancers held scarves, so can we do that? That will represent them the missing and murdered men.

But on her dress, she'll have -- she'll have strawberries, raspberries, and blueberries. The strawberries are that of the late Sharon Abraham, the one that was killed at the Pickton farm, so she'll have that on there, on her dress, so that you'll see it, so the family will see it. And then the blueberries, that was Tina Fontaine's favourite was blueberry pancakes, blueberry muffins, blueberry everything, she loved blueberries, so that's on her -- on her -- on her regalia, and each of those little jingles that you have are going to have a symbol of -- of like who she is, who -- how many -- there's 17 of them murdered and missing, so those 17 jiggles are going to have her on there.

Now, it -- because it's plasticine it looks like this, but the model for this is the late Sharon Abraham -- the one I mentioned was killed in the Pickton farm, the late Sharon Abraham's niece is the model for this. So it will be her measurements, her height, her long hair, all that will be on there.

So that's the -- you know, that's something that I really had no control over, or I never really -- but it's something that the grandmothers and the families chose, and everything that's been done with -- with the families it's been them -- it's been them. Nobody's -- I didn't see you better put a jingle dress dancer -- we're going to do this. It hasn't -- but I've done a lot of tweaking with them, like when we do things, I've had to do some tweaking, but always goes to final approve for them.

And I always try to give them -- because I've been victimized by violence and I know what it feels to be silenced and I know what it feels like to be -- to -- for somebody to -- to shut you down -- to keep you quiet, that's one thing I don't do with the families, and I don't do with those grandmothers, every decision that we make is always by them and then I do my best to try and fix it or tweak it if it is, if I've gone to extreme they'll tell you, they don't hold back when they tell you.

But there's a lot of things that those poor grandmothers and the poor families have gone through. And it's a lot of bullying. Bullying from my own leadership, no support. Bullying can be extreme. You know, but that's something that I want them to understand too is that's part of colonization, that's part of the whole Indian residential school thing, where you bully your own, you know, you can bully our own people. You can silence them.

You know, but because of that, that's one of the reasons why we have, I believe, the highest you know, missing and murdered women in Sagkeeng because of all the stuff. We never dealt with the whole Indian residential school thing. There was an Indian residential school that was placed in Sagkeeng. And nobody ever talks about it. Those grandmothers that are -- that I worked with all six of them, including Gladys, like Gladys is the seventh, working with them, they're all residential school survivors, you know. And each and one of them talked about when -- in our circles they didn't only talk about the loved one that they lost, but they talk about their own trauma and their own experience, what they -- what they endured, you know, and my heart just aches. And then I think about the residential school program back home nobody from the residential school program will even come to them and say, “How can I help you?” Or even come and see me and say, “Lillian, how can I help? How can I help?” Nobody wants that.

My own leadership, you know, you take a look at what happened, there was a murder. Like there was a violent murder not too long ago in Sagkeeng, like, why is that? Two girls from Sagkeeng killed another girl. They beat her to death. Something that's not talked about. But a relative of the -- own our Chief is part of it. But that's not being addressed. That's one of the reasons why he's not up front, that's the truth; but nobody wants to talk about the truth. Nobody wants to hear it. He doesn't want to talk about it. And that's one of the thing that upsets the families, not only -- it's his own family, like his granddaughters. That family -- because he doesn't acknowledge it -- his own family members have been this -- are part of that violence.

But how do we make that change? How do we stop the bullying? Well, we got to start talking. We got to be honest. We got to be truthful. To be honest, to be truthful, takes guts. It takes a lot of courage to do.
And you can be outcast. Your own community can even make fun of you, and put you down and make sure that they even they'll take you seriously. That's happened to me. I've been ridiculed. I've been shut done. I've been threatened. I've had it. I've even have had where council has even threatened me. You know. So I've gone through that, but I keep going.

But we got to just you know, it's our own leaders they need to understand that the power is not within themselves, the power is within the community, it's with their own people, it's the people that are resourceful. Where we are today, like four-and-a-half years -- like today -- like those old grandmas, there's only three of them that are living, and what's traumatic for me was that you know, that -- that I -- I lost them.
And as much as they needed me, I needed them. You know, I needed them so bad. Because now my parents are gone, see the lady the white, she's with her little walker there, that's Glady (ph), she was the one who walked -- got up from her chair and went walking. And the lady in blue, the blue skirt, she was the first one -- out of the grandmothers she was the first one to -- to go. She passed away first.

But this is some of the things that we did back home is working with the families, like working with young girls. You know, and I miss them. Like there's only three -- three of them alive. And I couldn't even go to Isabella's funeral my -- you know, she's so beautiful -- just a beautiful looking woman, and the last conversation we had -- she and I, she said to me -- it was like 10:30 at night, we're sitting in complete darkness, we're sitting visiting, and it's no lights inside, and then I'm trying to tell her my big dream, what I want. And that's our last conversation, and she died. You know, and I couldn't go. I just couldn't bring myself to -- to go and see her.

But I love them so much. You know, one of the last things -- one of them says to me is, "I'm so glad you're doing this," she says, "Because nobody ever talked about her, nobody even knew she -- she died. Nobody will -- nobody remembers her. Nobody remembers my nieces." It was her sister that was killed. So she has a sister and two nieces that were murdered so there's three from that family. You know, and -- and she was a residential school survivor, and she was so quiet, but always so elegant and she'd always tell me -- correct me how to sit too, you know, "Don't sit like that. You know, and (speaking Native language) you're a woman, sit -- sit right. You know, like
And a lot of times I'd get so angry and one of the things that they would say to me is, "Don't be so angry. Don't be so angry." And I'd say, "How can you not be angry? I'm frustrated they're not listening. They -- they don't want to do nothing." "Well, we'll think of something." And that was one of the last things we had a conversation about. Her and I. "We'll think of something." And the something was the monument you know.

So we're going to have an unveiling in -- in July, I believe, which will be the monument so she'll be placed in Sagkeeng at the powwow grounds so you know, I'm so glad -- so glad that's -- that's happening, but at the same time I'm sad because four of them don't get to see it. You know, so that's, I’m done, and I guess that's it.

MS. SHELBY THOMAS: Lillian, I just have a couple of questions for you. You mentioned when you were sharing your personal survivor story interacting with the police service, what police service was that?

MS. LILLIAN COOK: That was Powerview.

Powerview detachment.

MS. SHELBY THOMAS: The RCMP?

MS. LILLIAN COOK: M'hm.

MS. SHELBY THOMAS: M'hm. And your personal survivor stories, where did those occur?
MS. LILLIAN COOK: One took place in Sagkeeng and the other I don't know where. I don't know where I was other than -- it was dark -- like, it was dark and -- I don't even

MS. SHELBY THOMAS: Was it near Sagkeeng?

That you know -- Sagkeeng?

MS. LILLIAN COOK: No -- no, we were on our way to Winnipeg, I think, is where I was taken. Somewhere on Main Street, I think, in between Selkirk and -- Selkirk and Winnipeg, that's where I was taken because the one who picked me up took me to St. Benedict’s, the monastery, and that's where they -- that's where they gave me something to wear and then I'd be driven home that night.

MS. SHELBY THOMAS: Do you have any recommendations for the Commission?

MS. LILLIAN COOK: Well, I think my recommendations would be -- for me it would be encourage -- that's what it is -- to encourage -- to encourage our leadership -- to encourage our national and -- you know, and local Chiefs and to start bringing those -- to start helping, you know, to start really -- really helping our community. Like, to really take what's going on seriously, and that means pushing them -- pushing -- teaching them our Native ways, but pushing them to start teaching our people the language, we need to know our language. They also need to know -- like the services, how do you provide better services? Sometimes they need direction too, our leaders because our leaders may be, or is it -- maybe their parents were residential school survivors we don't know. Maybe they were -- their maybe intergenerational survivors, they need a little bit of help, they need to get some -- some kind of training, but they also have to bring that home to the community, that's what I think, those are my recommendations, is that the Commissioner maybe encourages the leaderships, encourages the national Chief to talk to the rest of the Chiefs to say, “You know what, you're going to have to start fixing some of the stuff on your own, you're going to have to take some responsibility because the responsibility is quite -- you know, you can do it.”

These old ladies back home they did it, you know, like at where they're at -- took four years, but look at where they're at today. You know. And it's -- and no money other than their own. You know, I remember when we went to Winnipeg like even that -- like I was on welfare. But we made it with my car, you know, and they had $20 each those two old ladies and we were going to go and we went. We didn't even have money for -- to go to McDonald's but we bought a hot chocolate each, you know. And we came home, but there they were happy. Did we get any kind of help? Did they get any kind of help from -- from any resource back home? No, because the resources didn't want to help. You have to provide -- you have to write a letter, is what they want. They want a letter and then it has to go through this first before we can -- we give you -- but you know what, you know, give it to another organization to do it.

Well, that has to stop -- passing the buck has to stop. It has to, and they have to kind of be encouraged that you know what, start dealing with stuff at home.

There's, you know, our institutions are full. Our prisons are full with our Aboriginal men. How do we -- how do we fix that? How do we prevent that? Well, start young and start with our middle aged men. Start giving them some power.

One of the things that we failed back home and like a -- this, for example, a gardening program. There was this big gardening program, you know, they give you -- they come there with their big tiller and they till your land and they want you to plant your -- and what I found -- because my husband is a residential school survivor, was that -- that was the most worse thing that anybody could have done to -- I wanted a garden because I didn't know the residential school survivors had gardens. I didn't know that, but I've gone to school. I went to university. And this -- and I didn't know that, but where my husband was triggered was because of the garden and he cursed the garden. He hated the garden, but we had the best looking garden. But what triggered him was -- he ends up telling me was that he worked -- for three-and-a-half years he worked on the garden that was his job, the big -- big giant garden back in Sagkeeng, he looked after that, was a bunch of -- him and a bunch of kids, that's all they did was garden, he said. Rain, shine, whatever they were gardening. But what triggered him the most was having somebody else who had never gardened to come and teach how to garden.

So that's the lack of knowledge from my own home you know, where our helpers, where our -- where our organization don't do their homework and say, how many people are Indian residential school survivors? How many of them -- what was their jobs? What was their responsibility? How many can we find? How many or Indian residential school survivors that are still alive? Let's go see them and let's find out what kind of work they did.
And let's start fixing the problem.

How hard is that for the -- for the national Chief and for the other Chiefs to say, you know what, can you maybe touch on that? Can you just see and then give us back what's happening with that?
And how many of them actually cleaned? Who were the cleaners? What exactly -- what exactly did they do and how many were in the laundry department now, they have certain skills. So how can we start beginning to heal those residential school survivors?

So once they feel good, can they -- that good feeling that they have once they start maybe nurturing those gardens maybe that residential school survivor that was really angry with his being -- you know, having a non-residential school survivor coming to try and teach him how to plant potatoes? Come and teach him. Or can it be, let's find out how many residential school survivors -- and get that residential school survivor, give him a little bit of work, and let's alternate, can he go and teach him and then teach him and then they'll all exchange for a little bit of money.

But they're all -- but what's happening in the end is they're all sharing, and they're all talking about their experience in the residential school. They're talking about what happened when they planted that. What happened that night. Who else better than me or you who are not residential school survivor to try and drag that information out of them. They can do it themselves.

That's how healing starts. And once he or she starts feel -- feeling good doesn't that goodness trickle down to the next generation, maybe to your daughter, maybe to your son? And then to your grandbabies.
And then how else now -- now with that skill what else can you do with that?

And what about the people who are responsible for the laundry? What kind of resources can we bring back home that can, you know, that can maybe open up a laundry mat, maybe open -- or even showing people again how to iron, those kinds of things, how to feel good about them.
But start young. It doesn’t have to be when they're be pre-teens, they could be like ten years old and learning all these little things, but they're learning how to iron.
If that's what she did, then say yes, you know what, I'll give you a little bit of money. Can you teach -- can you come and teach the young girls or the young kids that are in -- in daycare or else -- not in daycare, but maybe grade one -- maybe grade four, can you teach them how to iron?
And then they'll learn that skill by the time they're however old. Those are my recommendations. Is to just encourage them to start looking beyond and start opening up and that's how we bring healing.

But walking around with a sign saying, I want justice. Doesn't help anybody. So that's my recommendation is that, encourage the Chiefs and -- to make those changes, to look inside -- to look inside their home, who else better to know your house? I know my own home. I know when it's dirty. I know what needs to be cleaned.
Hey, but does the government know how dirty or how clean my house is? But I want him or her to come and clean it.
It's not going to -- she's not -- or Trudeau's not going to come and clean it. No matter how many signs I hold in protest, he's not going to come, so we have to fix our own
-- our own stuff. That stuff may not have been ours, but it was imposed on us and now we have to fix it. Nobody's going to fix it for us. So that's -- that's all I have to say.

MS. SHELBY THOMAS: Commissioner Audette, do you are any comments or questions?

COMMISSIONER MICHELE AUDETTE: We'll start with the -- with the moms.

MS. FLORENCE CATCHEWAY: (Speaking Native language).

MS. DARLENE OSBORNE: (Speaking Native language). I thank you very much for your -- for your great work that you're doing for grandmothers, what you went through as a little girl. You're telling my story.
And I understand what you went through. That you couldn't tell your story because you -- you blamed yourself and that's what I did. But we're survivors, and our purpose is to keep on helping our girls and our women that are going through the same thing. Because we see a lot of them, they're very silent, they're afraid. They're afraid to talk, but like you and me we're here to support any girls or women or young boys and men as well. And I thank you for your story, and I encourage you -- I just had tears in my eyes when you were communicating with your language, and that's -- I feel good when I talk my language as well -- talking to an Elder makes me feel good. (Speaking Native language), thank you.

UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: Migwetch.

COMMISSIONER MICHÈLE AUDETTE: Merci.

MS. ISABELLE MORRIS: Migwetch. (Speaking Native language). I'm Cree, from Split Lake, and it's an honour that you came this far to tell your story, because I too went to your community to tell my story because I couldn't tell my story here in this same building of that part of when I was sent away to residential school for a while. Yeah. And it's an honour for you to come this -- this -- this far. And -- and sharing your story, and your helping a lot of people in sharing, and keep it.

And also, the grandmothers -- one of the grandmothers I recognize. I dance with her in powwow. Yeah, I'm a traditional dancer and I go to your community also, so that in itself and you have that beautiful turtle lodge. There was a pipe that was brought in there by Dave Chuchane (ph) for the grandmother council of Elders.
Continue to walk that way in helping people, okay. Yeah, it's an honour. Migwetch.

MS. LILLIAN COOK: Migwetch.

COMMISSIONER MICHELE AUDETTE: Merci, Isabelle. Merci, Lillian, I feel like our paths crossed somewhere or you mentioned things that you did with the flowers, it's something I saw or heard about it. The monument, it's something I heard, and there's many things that you mention that it's either somebody shared to me or we saw it on the news, but I didn't know that one day I will be the one receiving your truth.

But most of all your courage where our sister said it, we're all survivors. And somebody stole our spirit one night or maybe two nights or you know, over and over, and it -- we became who we are today. And I'm impressed and amazed by your resilience. How clear you share to Canada, but also to our leadership what was your experience -- your truth; but your truth it's many, many women who are, sad to say, still facing that today.

Last week as an example, we were in the Mohawk territory they call Montreal, the City of Montreal, and a woman that was a Chief for many years -- eight years I would say, to a community that there no running water, no electricity. And she was, I guess the second women to be the Chief of that community. But when she came and spoke to us, I saw her when you share your truth about the lateral violence we do not hear enough about this reality.
We say yes, the institution are responsible or they have responsibilities but us also as Anishnabe, UA, Cree, or Mohawk or Indigenous people of this land who are living in the community are also accountable, so your voice -- your message to these very -- very important and she won't feel alone anymore, that women from Kikcisakik. So thank you very much. But also, to say you come with solutions or recommendation not just blaming because we're used to that,
to blame and pass the buck, as you said it.

MS. LILLIAN COOK: Yeah.

COMMISSIONER MICHÈLE AUDETTE: Or pass the basket. I'll keep my moccasin, I don't pass it. But my question to you, Lillian, what do we say in 2018 -- I have five kids, I'm proud of them, two girls, and I told my three boys, “I don't want you to become the perpetrator,” that cycle never end, has to stop, but to the girls, what do we say to them if the uncle or a man from the community do what they did you to, what do you say to our girls today?

MS. LILLIAN COOK: So what I say is this -- like I have two boys, because I've been a victim of violence, but also because my father loved me and my sister and my little brother so much, and like he was an old -- old man, you know, like 72 already and I was only 12, you know, one of the things he loved me and loved us, and so my memory of that I keep, but because I've been victim -- victimized, what I did with my boys, same thing, I didn't want my boys to become alcoholics. I didn't want my boys to -- to be addicted in drugs, how do I stop that? I started very early, right after the diagnosis with cancer, because I was at the stage three with breast cancer, and I refused -- and I made a deal, remember I said I made a deal, with -- with the guy who raped me, my brother-in-law, but I also made a deal too back 13 years ago I made a deal with Creator, and I said to Him, because I had stage three cancer, the cancer had spread from my breast to my womb, I said, “I'll make you a deal, you let me -- let me live until my boys are finished high school, after that you can take me.” Is what I said to God. I said to the Creator, “I'll make you a deal. I'll do whatever it is you want me to do,” because that's what I said once before, I only said that to one man and I was saying that now to the Spirit, “I'll make you a deal, you keep me alive and then you can take me after that,” that's what I said to God and I was just shaking because I thought, oh, my gosh I'm -- you know, who am I making a deal with now?

So I thought well, I was groomed to understand about grooming, so I knew that I was groomed by
-- when I was 12 years old by another man, so I thought well, I'm going to groom my sons. On what ugliness happened to me, I'm going to turn it around, but I'll groom my sons to be a certain way so I said to my boys, my -- my baby was ten years old at the time and my other boy was 14, “Whenever you see a woman,” I said, “It doesn't matter how she looks,” I said “If she's an old lady, maybe she's drunk, maybe you know her as the town drunk, but you're going to open that door for her. You're going to open that doors for her,” I said, “And if -- if you're on the bus in Winnipeg,” because my oldest boy was always going to in basketball and sometimes they'd go busing with the whole team, just as part of -- I don't know what the coach was thinking this is part of their experience, but when they would go, I said, “To give them, give her your seat.” I didn't talk about giving an Elderly man a seat, I said, “The women. You give her a seat. For that one day,” I said to my boys, “For that one moment you're her hero.
Because before that,” I said, “Somebody treated her like dirt. You're never going to do that again.” I said to my boys because I was treated like dirt and that's going to happen. I said that to my boys -- and my boys, I said, “Whenever you see any women, I don't care who it is and I don't care what colour she is, you're going to open that door for her.”

My boys do that for me all the time. My boys will always do that whenever we're in the mall, going to the mall, they open the door whoever, if they're up ahead, of course, they'll be up ahead of me, they don't want to walk around with mom. But they're up ahead and they'll open the door for the women always. And especially if she's older. “The younger girls can take care of themselves,” I said, “But still if she's there and that's the only one there and you're there you can open that door for her. For that one minute,” I said, “You're a hero. You don't know what she -- what kind of a life she had,” that's how we change our boys, you know. We talk to them like that because of our own experience, how do we want to be treated.

And for our young girls, you know, there's a picture there with all the -- with the grandmothers and where with all these young girls, and one of things that I thought, how do I protect these young girls? What do I do? How do I do it, and how do I get these little old ladies to not just be the token Elder, just to sit there, and how do I get them active? So all those girls that you see there, each girl was individual -- each girl -- I had a summer camp, it was called (speaking Native language) and I wanted them to learn some of the things that I learned growing up in a maternal home, and so those little grandmas -- and the lady that I'm sitting in the back with, she's in white, and she was just simply amazing and I -- we had a talk before that because I knew her history, and what I said to her was, “I need you to make sure that the girls understand. You need to -- we need to protect them.” And all the grandmothers said, okay. So each grandmother had four girls to a table, or three girls to a table and each grandmother was responsible for every presentation that was up, each grandmother had to do their own little mini circle and feedback, they even had facials -- the girls had the opportunity to -- with all those little old ladies, each and one of those little old ladies had a facial done. Mud masks, they had an avocado mask, they had their nails done by all these girls. And all these girls just loved it.

You know, taking care of the grandma and then the grandmother nurturing them.

But one of the things one of the other grandmothers say is that when she does her presentation she says, “I remember when I was just a young girl, I was 14 years old,” she says to them. And of course, the girls are scrapbooking, they're all scrapbooking with their grand -- grandmother at the table they're supposed to be listening, but they're scrapbooking, and I'm watching. I'm actually watching another presenter in the back because I was the organiser so I'm monitoring what's going on, so I'm watching all the kind of activity, and they're kind of doodling and whatever it is that they do, and the girls -- and so the grandmother says, “I remember at 14 years old having my first kiss. I remember what that feels like. I remember that young boy when he kissed me and how I felt. I remember that feeling or that funny feeling comes in your stomach and inside your chest, I've felt that.” And now the doodling stopped. And the grandmother says, “And I remember the first kiss that I got that he gave me, but I also remember him going to my neck and kissing my neck. And I remember how good it felt,” but you know what she says, “I didn't have no boundaries -- nobody ever taught me about boundaries. From there,” she says, “From him touching me,” she says, “From him kissing me came the touch, he started touching me. Even though I knew it was wrong, I allowed it to happen. Because of that,” she says, “My daughter is sitting in the back there,” she said, “I had her when I was 14.” She said, “And I gave my daughter up for adoption but, she comes with me now, she says to do -- to do the work that I need to do,” she said. “So what I'm telling you now,” she says, “Is that when you come across these young boys,” she says, “You need to know to say no. When it feels good,” she says, “Because you're going to be excited and you want to be with him. I wanted to be with him. I know what it feels like. I still remember my first kiss.” She says, “I still remember the first touch. I remember my first hickey. He gave me.” And it was just quiet and all these girls are just staring at her, “But you need to have boundaries. You need to tell him no. You need to tell him that's enough. You don't need to go there. And if he starts even going further than that and not listening to you by saying no then you start yelling and you start screaming because we're here to protect you and you need to know to be protected.”

So it took grandmothers other than if I would have went up there to start telling these young girls I probably would have looked like maybe their mom or something or maybe you know, and lecturing, but when it comes to a grand -- a -- a grandmother or a great grandmother sharing so openly then you reach the young people there's just something -- there's just something magical, something so powerful when you speak the truth and those old grandmothers are so honest and so hide nothing, but that's what they say in our language, dedwewin, the truth it's so powerful, so that's my recommendation, start teaching, using our grandmothers, using our gifts to help share to help the young moms to talk about their story. Grandmothers are so powerful. You know, and that's why I go to them, like I barely have younger people -- well with, women my age, it's always with the grandmas because I learn so much from them and it's because of their truth. They don't hide nothing.

COMMISSIONER MICHÈLE AUDETTE: And you talk about bullying, how the work of the Inquiry is also to propose recommendation to all governments, including ours, and I'm a strong believer that we have good people everywhere, including our communities, so we can present to -- you mentioned, the national Chief and other organization this is what we're proposing after receiving all the truth from amazing women and one of them, or many of them about bullying, what would you recommend to us to ...

MS. LILLIAN COOK: What I -- what I recommend, you know, like what you're doing now, like even with the national Inquiry and your note taking, like I mean you're -- you're that voice, you know, you're that voice. And you have it in you to make that change. You have it in you that's your gift, that's what Creator gave you. You know, that's yours -- that's your responsibility, that's your medicine bundle, mine is different, her is different, each in one of us has a different bundle, but that's yours and whoever it is within your group, that is your bundle.

You know, and always -- I always believe in prayer, like I told you I make deals -- like keep me alive till I'm -- till they're 18, well now they're 28 and -- and 24 you know, so I'm -- and plus I seen my own grandchildren. I didn't have grandchildren back then. But I believe in prayer.

There's something else that I want to share, always believe in you. That you can do it no matter what anybody says, no matter if you know, if -- if Trudeau says, "No -- no you can't do this it's impossible then you take it higher -- higher than that."

When I -- when I started my healing -- when I started working on myself is, like I said I had to go out in the bush because I was really terrified of being in the bush after all the things that happened to me. One of the things that I took was -- and I practiced yoga and might as well just get rid of all this ugly stuff that I was feeling, so I'd go into the bush with my tobacco, I took a smudge bowl, secretly, I didn't want anybody to me going into the bush -- so I took my tobacco, my smudge bowl, my sage and I would -- and I made a little circle, and circled , and made a little like a secret circle for myself and -- and then I -- I prayed -- I prayed to that wind you know, and I said (speaking Native language) you know, (speaking Native language) because I'm kind of scared wind, that I'm here alone in the bush you know. But watch over me. But anyway, aside from my little prayer as I was praying there was this wind -- this is no joke, this is not even a lie, that's how I believe, I believe that what you'll do if you pray and if it's from here because I do believe Spirit is watching you. But I was showered with leaves. Not everywhere else, just where I was standing. Other things have happened to me like that where I've gone into the bush to pray. I've even had deer, like (speaking Native language) coming to me like I -- I was trying to find a good spot in the bush to pray, and to meditate, and I heard something and I looked and there was this big amazing deer with his antlers and I said, (speaking Native language) I'll pray here. So I put my pipe there. My little bag and I didn't look at him and I just took everything out and -- and I prayed. And I -- I said my prayers, I smoked my pipe, I said my prayers, and then I looked up -- well, you know, it's -- but that's your faith, you have to surrender you know. You have to be honest. You can't hide nothing, so when I did that and when I looked at him he -- he did this with his hoof (unreportable sound) he bowed his head and he went walking. He stayed with me through my prayer. But that would happen another time where things like that would happen to me, you know.

But everything that I do is I believe in prayer. And I have nothing else I don't have anything else you know, I'm just -- that's all I have is that faith and then, but it's something that I was given I guess, you know, and -- and with you that's my recommendation like to help you is let things go. Your fear. Face it, take it and tell him how scared you are, how deathly afraid you are and how they're not going to listen. What do you do. How do I -- how do I do that? You know, and it will happen. You know, and I've been so lucky and that's all I could -- that's all else I can say because that's the government that you're talking to. You know, that's it.

COMMISSIONER MICHÈLE AUDETTE: Well, that's a lot. And very -- very powerful. I would like to can you if you would accept to receive a gift from us and I would like to ask my strong beautiful Kokum to explain the beautiful history behind this.

MS. BERNIE POITRAS: I just want to say hello, to Lillian, and I was listening to your -- your journey and that and I'm going to witness in Vancouver in the next couple of weeks and that and thank you for your truth. It's given me a lot of insight because I'm really scared too. But I was always taught that you are only as sick as your secret. And my secret is going to be spoken in a couple of weeks, thank you, for your courage, but most of all like your honesty and your resilience, it's amazing, yeah. And I'm -- I'm really grateful that you're here. I'm grateful that all the family members are here to -- to help us to you know, because many people don't think that a lot of the staff here -- that we're just workers. We're also family members and we're survivors, there's many of us that are here and all across Canada, so when the families look at us like they -- I assume that they think we're just here, heck, we're paid. No, we're not. We're survivors too and we are family members that have been in a very affected, and this is going to be my first time in over 40 years that I get to share my story. And it's because of women like you and Hilda that have really helped to just give us that strength to keep you know this going and supporting the -- you know, Commissioners, supporting the family most of all those, all across Canada, because a lot of this is so hidden that nobody wants to talk about it.

I understand about the leadership too and I've been on those front lines in Vancouver -- since '86 I started to be involved with the murdered and missing women nationally, and we fought through those doors do get through those doors to some of the biggest leaders of Canada and it took us over 20 years, but I also want to acknowledge the grandmother that you had a picture of, I think Harriet Prince (ph) she's one of our grandmothers in Vancouver that we really honour too, and she does a lot of work with us on the frontlines and that, so it was so nice to see a picture of her, but I just want to share -- and I -- you probably heard the story about these eagle feathers, you know, making their way from my home territory in Haida Gwaii and it’s amazing you know, how the families and the spiritual people have come forward to make sure that every place that we come to is that the family members that they receive the eagle feathers from so many different territories. I -- I just am just amazing and, but I'm so honoured to give one of Elders the grandmothers here to give to you and say (speaking Native language) to you again.

MS. SHELBY THOMAS: Commissioner Audette, can we adjourn the session for 15 minutes.

COMMISSIONER MICHÈLE AUDETTE: Oui - oui bien sûr.
